

Editorial Desk

Mr. Sandip Nepal, Mr. Amit Pyakurel, Mr. Saurabh K.C., Mr. Chittaranjan Pandey & Mr. Vivek Risal
(From left to right)

It seemed like just yesterday when we had brought out the 2011 edition of MEX Yearbook. But as time aged on, it seems the company has turned a full circle and we are again in front of our dear readers with an endeavor of the third edition of the year book. While nothing seems to have changed in the international front with Europe and the US still struggling with financial crisis and Asian economies slowing down, we have tried to bring some diversity to this edition.

In this edition, we have introduced an exciting section called "the almanac". This section will feature a breakdown of events which have shaken the financial markets. For easy comprehension, we have broken down the events according to months so that our readers are better able to comprehend which events affect their trading and be ready for such events in the future.

We have also introduced the macroeconomic data section. This section will detail the major macroeconomic data of Nepal over the last 5 years. The purpose of introducing this section is that we feel that information about both international and domestic economic state is necessary to empower our readers to become true investors and the investors should be capable enough to understand why the Nepalese economy is going through the current financial imbroglio.

Likewise, we have also incorporated financial quotes which we feel are relevant to the world of investing.

One thing we would like to point out is that while the editorial team has changed over time, the core theme of publishing the year book, which always was to better empower our readers in the world of commodity trading, hasn't changed.

Over time, we have managed to broaden the scope of the year book, but the central theme remains the same.

Finally, we would like to thank everyone involved in making this noble venture a success that we had never dreamed of. We would like to thank the experts who have taken the time and effort in penning their thoughts. A round of thanks goes to the design and printing team who has made this issue and the previous issues a monumental success. Special thanks go to our MD, Mr. Dipendra Khatiwada and CEO, Mr. Jitesh Surendran for their constructive ideas and their warm support without which the MEX Yearbook would not have been a possibility.

Lastly, as always, we urge our readers to stay informative and provide us with their valuable suggestions to make the coming editions even more fruitful.

The editorial desk can be contacted through: r&d@mexnepal.com